

Our daily quality of life depends on steel – which depends on coking coal.

The kettle you boil to make your tea on a morning, the car you drive to work, the nuclear power station and wind turbine that generate your electricity, the office you work in, the train journey to visit family, the home you live in, the ferry for a holiday, the ship that brings goods to the UK, the cooker that cooks your dinner...

